

Making noble choices opens the door to goodness in my life

Making noble choices opens the door to goodness in my life.

I am a firm believer in my ability to dictate what life throws out to me. When I make noble choices, goodness comes back to me in amazing amounts.

My professional mantra is to maintain honesty in all interactions. Avoiding embellishments to truths saves me from feeling guilty or burdened. Others deserve sincerity as much as I do.

It is unfair to mislead others for personal gain. When the truth is revealed, it leaves others upset and disappointed. I choose to project positivity and light in all my interactions. It is okay by me if doing this limits my worldly success.

Giving freely results in kindness and thoughtfulness coming my way. When I let go of the grip on my financial resources, I feel less controlled by it.

Choosing to share my money with others gives me a greater sense of fulfillment than spending it on myself. There is greater worth in improving the lives of those around me.

Complaining rarely turns my trying situations around. Instead, I choose to be grateful for what comes and make the most of it. It pays off when I least expect it.

Today, being honest, upstanding, and kind is my calling and I am proud of it. I am ready to make the decisions that my soul knows are right. My inner voice guides me to choices that result in positive outcomes each time.

Self-Reflection Questions:

1. What are the benefits of being an honorable spouse and partner?
2. How effective is nobility when it comes to pacifying a tense situation?
3. What other positive traits of mine are amplified when I choose to live honorably?